Our Principles of Integration

We believe that integration improves client service. We engage in a variety of integration activities to improve client service, including: Our originating merger; sharing programming, staff, expertise, and space; and other collaborative activities. For us, integration is an ongoing process, not a one-time activity, and related integrations must:

Create value for clients including enhancing awareness, accessibility, and equality across populations. Continuity, quality, and enhancement of current services must be balanced with evidence-based understandings of changing client needs and demands. Changes must be quality-driven, reflect leading best practices, and be implemented in a manner that ensures transitions are as seamless as possible from a client perspective.

Be implement in a transparent manner and be clearly communicated to stakeholders in a timely manner.

Leverage local strengths and expertise respecting local community support; local needs and services; and the culture and expertise of partners. Client-centred integration activities are flexible, incorporating different strengths-based practices to encourage innovation and enhance system responsiveness.

Be sustainable.
